From present indications, the receipts of yesterday will exceed the result of 1912 Bell Day by about $500 or $700. For the first time in three years Bell Day fails, therefore, to be more lucrative to the Home for incurables than Tag Day to the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association. The 1913 Tag Day netted $3.599.

CAMP NEAR TOWN

Officers Under Brigadier-General Should Have Waited for Council Crozier to March Through Richmond To-Morrow.

Study of Famous Virginia Battlefields.

The thirty-five distinguished memternoon on the march from the present camp at Seven Pines to the next stop-ping place near Gordonville. For several days, the party has been encamped within a few miles of this city, studying the ground of the famous seven days' fight around the Confederate Capitol, and officers in small groups have dropped into town for social engagements and relaxation.

The camp is under the command of Brigadier-General William Crozier, who is president of the Army War College. Yesterday the riders pitched camp at Walnut Grove Church, before that at Gaines' Mill, and this morning they are scheduled to dismount at Seven Pines. The site of the struggle at Seven Pines offers the most interesting study of any of the battlefields immediately surrounding the city and full time will be devoted by the War College men to going over the time-worn entreuchmonets.

The party has already marched down

The party has already marched down from Washington and is now just beginning the return trip. The journey to Gordonsville from Seven Pines will be accomplished in three stages, the first camp being pitched Monday night beyond Richmond on the Louis Read hrst camp being pitched Monday night beyond Richmond on the Louisa Road. Many of the officers will come into the city to-day. Major-General Colin Mc-Kenzle and Colonel George Paley, both of the British army, and Brigadier-General Frank D. Baldwin, of the United States army, have left the party after having been its guests for some time.

with all annexed territory was shown by figures submitted by Mr. Dabney. Since 1965 the city has spent twice as much in annexed territory as has been received back in taxes. In South Richmond $295,500 has been paid into the city treasury, and $710,900 has been spent, or is being spent, on permanent improvements. In addition the city is building a bridge at a cost of $460,000. While on the subject of the Southside benefits by consolidation, Mr. Dabney invited any man in the audience to stand up and say that his rent had been increased 25 per cent as has been stated frequently by antiannexationists.

Owing to the brevity of their talks, the legislative candidates had little time to discuss anything beyond their platforms. All have been promulgated through the public press, and, with few exceptions, vary but little. The first to be introduced was James E. Cannon. He was followed in order by Edwin P. Cox, James J. Veterans Provide for Decorations to the Pinced on Lee's Monument.

Plans for the observance of Lee Memorial Day, May 30, were discussed at the regular monthly meeting of Lee Camp at Lee Camp Hall last night. A resolution was passed providing a regular annual appropriation of $5 for a floral decoration to be placed on Lee Monument every Memorial Day.

The arrangements for the procession to be held that day were also brought before the meeting, but have not yet been completed. It is probable that the members of the camp, the Blues, the Grays and the Daughters of the Confederacy will gather at Park Place Methodist Church, opposite Monroe Park, to form the march.
